

Low pressure will continue to track northeast into Ontario today. It will strengthen significantly as it heads northeast, and will swing a cold front through the Ohio Valley late this morning/early afternoon. South of the low, southerly winds will be strong and gusty today, with gusts in the 40-45 mph range expected. Loose outdoor objects may be blown around and some tree limbs may fall. Isolated power outages will be possible. Drivers of high profile vehicles should use caution as windy conditions will make driving difficult.
